

A Talk By Liza Grandia, Ph.D.

Assoc. Professor of Native American Studies, UC Davis

Climate Change and Conservation among Latin American Indigenous People

LIZA GRANDIA, PH.D. is an Associate Professor of Native American Studies at UC Davis. A graduate of Yale and UC Berkeley, she was one of 13 faculty selected nationally for the Mellon New Directions Fellow for her project 'Toxic Trespass,' for advanced training in environmental health and toxicology, 2017–19. Dr. Grandia is Director of the Indigenous Research Center of the Americas. Her research interests include peasants and agrarian change, corporate trade and globalization, foreign aid and empire, biodiversity conservation, political ecology and environmental justice, the politics of cancer, and theories of the commons.

Tuesday February 18, 7:30 PM

Friends Meetinghouse 345 L Street (at 4th), Davis

Davis Friends Meeting (Quakers)

Open • Welcoming • Affirming

We request that you not wear perfume or scented products to this event.